ACTIVE AND PASSIONATE INTEREST AND INTENDED RESULTS

Human beings, by their origin and intent, wish for success. They are blessed with a creative competitive spirit from the very moment of their conception. Psychologists, medical practitioners, physiologists etc propose that if human beings lose this spirit of success it becomes 'contra naturam humanam'. We, human beings, starting from the first moment of our conception are directed to success. One of the main factors that would lead us to success is the interest that is dedicated in its process. This passion and interest is clearly explained by one of the greatest writers of the English world T. S. Eliot, "It is obvious that we can no more explain a passion to a person who has never experienced it than we can explain light to the blind." Interest and passion are the core factors in the attempt for success.

When interest and passion are combined with hard work, there comes wonderful result. This is what the story of Steve Jobs teaches us. Steven Paul Jobs, American business magnate, inventor, and investor, was born on 24th February 1955, was the co-founder, chairman and CEO of Apple, and the founder, chairman, and CEO of NeXT. In 1985, Jobs was forced out of Apple, but later in 1997, Jobs returned to Apple as CEO after the company's acquisition of NeXT. He was largely responsible for reviving Apple, which was on the verge of bankruptcy. He worked closely with English designer Jony Ive to develop a line of products that had larger cultural ramifications, beginning with the "Think different", advertising campaign and leading to the Apple Store, App Store (iOS), iMac, iPad, iPod, iPhone, iTunes and iTunes Store. He died of respiratory arrest related to the tumor in 2011, at the age of 56. In 2022, he was posthumously awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom.

Steve Jobs tells "You have to be burning with an idea, or a problem, or a wrong that you want to right. If you're not passionate enough from the start, you will never stick it out". We notice several factors of success in this quote of Steve Jobs and it is closely connected with life and contributions. The first factor that he stresses is 'a burning idea'. It can be either a problem or something that must be made right. The second factor he stresses is the passion from the very beginning. If there is a burning passion from the very beginning of an idea, the goal will be achieved.

Whether we are on vacation or not, let us keep burning ideas within us always, and let us maintain a strong passion from the beginning till the end of the attainment and let us be successful persons and not the mark of failures. The Parable of the Talents of the Holy Bible explains the same factor of interest and commitment, "And he who had received the five talents came forward, bringing five talents more, saying, 'Master, you delivered to me five talents; here I have made five talents more.' His master said to him, 'Well done, good and faithful servant. You have been faithful over a little; I will set you over much. Enter into the joy of your master.'" (Mt. 25, 20-21).

HYBRID MODEL FOR FINE-GRAINED SENTIMENT CLASSIFICATION IN DEEP LEARNING ENVIRONMENT

The information available on the internet has been spiralling exponentially. As the result, the activities on social media have grown manifold. Studies reveal that around 5 million videos are viewed on YouTube daily. Approximately four lakh Tweets are posted on Twitter in just 60 seconds, and over 3 lakh statuses are updated on Facebook.

Human sentiments and opinions are significant parts of these activities. Today, corporates want to know about customers' sentiments for invaluable information.

People have freedom on social media to express their sentiments about a product, brand, company, or other subjects. Social media text is a rich source of information regarding one's personality and his/her socio-cultural contexts. The sentiment analysis from social media text has benefited consumers and organisations. Consumers can access user reviews without consulting their family and friends while planning to purchase any product. Likewise, organisations need not conduct physical research or field surveys to collect customer opinion polls. However, evaluating a vast volume of social media text from diverse sites needs time and resources. Each site has a specific group of users. Thus, the evaluation and classification of sentiments from text require an automated system.

In order to use the sentiment analysis tools, it can be combined with deep learning models. Deep learning is a branch of Machine Learning (ML) stimulated by Artificial Neural Networks (ANN). It uses Artificial Intelligence (AI) to process data as the human brain does. It provides the learning of data in a supervised and unsupervised way with the support of a hierarchy of layers. Deep learning uses algorithms in an increasing chain of events to resolve more complex issues and manage huge data with minimal human support. Due to deep learning's automatic feature learning ability, it is widely selected to perform sentiment analysis. So, it can learn automatically to discover exploratory and discriminative representations from the data.

The adoption of deep learning in sentiment analysis is motivated by the increase of training data with multi-class classification—also, the success of word embedding.

Sometimes, deep learning and ML are used interchangeably. Deep learning is machine learning, but it is advanced. When the machine makes, human input is required in ML to correct it and force the model to learn. However, through advanced algorithms, neural networks can learn to overcome mistakes in deep learning. As huge labelled data is available, it is effortless to train a model on that and then produce results in a small amount of time. The sentiment analysis in deep learning is capable to classify human sentiment in to different classes like positive, negative or neutral and thereby help different business organizations and government to take decision.
